

TAX LEADERSHIP PROGRAMME

LEADING IN A COMPLEX TAX WORLD

PROGRAMME OBJECTIVE

The business world and the fiscal landscape are changing at an unseen pace. Governments across the globe are announcing fiscal measures faster than ever. International institutions such as the OECD, United Nations, as well as the EU institutions and the G20 are imposing guidelines and hard laws on their respective member states in order to do away with harmful tax competition and overly aggressive tax planning. It is in this volatile, uncertain, complex and ambiguous world that senior tax leaders need to align their tax strategy to the overall business strategy of their company.

A task that is more complex than ever and that requires different leadership skills and attitudes than only a few years ago.

The one-week programme, which is co-designed between CEDEP and International School for Tax Leadership, will combine the view of leading academic faculty in the domains of strategy, governance and leadership with the vision of top professionals from the global tax scene.

The overall objective of the programme is to help senior tax leaders in their reflection on the complex and drastically changing fiscal world. The programme will help frame the complexity and find solutions to deal with it.

The combination of experienced faculty mixed with qualified, multicultural representatives from the business world will create a unique opportunity to test and challenge assumptions, push ideas and develop different ways to lead a tax team and interact with the many stakeholders a Head of Tax has.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

Senior Tax Professionals leading the global tax department of a multinational company, bank, private equity firm and Senior Tax Professionals leading a large region or division of a multinational company, bank or private equity firm.

Senior in-house treasurers and in-house legal counsel who interact frequently with the tax team of their company.

There will be no consultants or lawyers admitted to the programme.
